Introduction

Every product has been carefully handpicked from the workplace of Indigenous communities.

Indigena Collection
Sisal & Iraca

Ancestral know-how

Made by the Indigenous Nukak, semi-nomadic people living in the Upper Amazon region, the creation-process requires ancestral know-how that has been passed on from generation to generation. The production of these objects require many hours of precision and manual labour in order to create unique and timeless pieces.

Take what you need

The Nukak-people are hunter-gatherers that only take what they need from nature. These semi-nomadic people use these baskets to transport their personal belongings during their travels. Through these beautiful objects, we hope to take you on their journey.

100% natural

For the Indigenous people, nature is a source of priceless treasures. This is where they go to forage chiquechique, iraca, sisal, caña flecha... These materials are used to create baskets, tableware and so much more.

use & maintenance

Sisal & Iraca are natural materials and can be cleaned using water. More so, it's actually beneficial for the maintenance of these objects to be regularly washed with water.

“Through these products you will discover the artisans we work with. Every moment they are not occupied with their daily tasks, the women of the village spend on the creation of these objects.

In the shadow of a tree or late in the evening while the children are sleeping, you will find these women working on their creations. The sale of their products allows them to support their family.”
